JAPANESE TREATY APPROVED

London, Nov. 28.
The House of Commons tonight approved the Japanese peace treaty without a party division.
Two Labour Party members spoke briefly against the treaty, but no other opposition was voiced as the measure was given its third and final reading in the Commons.
Technically, the act of ratifying the treaty is a function of the Crown, and Parliament can vote neither for nor against actual ratification.
But, in effect, the bill passed on Tuesday night providing for carrying into effect the treaty of peace with Japan, means ratification.—Associated Press.

CEREMONY IN U.S.

Washington, Nov. 28.
Japan in this afternoon handed the United States its formal ratification of the peace treaty with Allied powers.
Signed before a Japanese flag, which was displayed in Washington for the first time since the Pearl Harbor attack nearly 10 years ago, Kyuji Takemura, Chief of the Japanese Overseas Agency in Washington, handed the ratification document to James Webb, Under-Secretary of State, who received it in behalf of the United States and other Allies, which are signatory to the pact.

Mr. Takemura, now the ranking Tokyo official in the United States, said:
"It is a great honour and pleasant duty for me to present the United States Government with the instrument of ratification of the peace treaty with Japan on behalf of the Japanese Government."

Mr. Takemura spoke in a clear, firm voice as he prepared to hand to Mr. Webb the maroon velvet-bound document bearing Japan's national chrysanthemum emblem.
"On this occasion," Mr. Takemura said, "I would like to read a message from Prime Minister Yoshida."

YOSHIDA'S MESSAGE

The Premier in his message said:
"It is with profound satisfaction that the Japanese Government deposits its instrument of ratification of the treaty of peace which has been approved by an overwhelming majority vote in the Diet."

"I desire to express my nation's appreciation of the initiative and leadership taken by the United States Government in bringing about a peace settlement for Japan. I confidently hope that ratifications by other powers will follow in quick succession for consummation of the peace and for the admission of Japan as an active and useful member in the family of nations." — Associated Press.

JAPAN-KOREA TALKS

Tokyo, Nov. 28.
South Korea's chief delegate to a bilateral conference with Japan agreed today to try again at working out a basis for a treaty between the two countries.

Dr. Y. C. Yang, Korean Ambassador to the U.S., cancelled his reservation to leave on Thursday by plane for Washington.

Dr. Yang said he had made the reservation after he "blew up" at the last session "because of failure to accomplish anything" in talks since October 20.
However, Dr. Yang said in an interview, "The Japanese delegates showed a new attitude today. I have received permission from President Rhee to postpone my departure." — Associated Press.

Russian Answer To Tito

Paris, Nov. 28.
The Political Committee of the United Nations today continued consideration of Yugoslavia's complaint of "hostile aggressive pressure" by the Soviet Union and her Balkan satellites.

On Monday and yesterday the Committee heard Yugoslav Minister of State, M. Milovan Djilas, deliver a six-hour indictment of the Communists.
Today the Soviet Union's A. Sobolev, former Assistant Secretary-General of the United Nations, answered the Yugoslav charges.
He declared that the charge was "nothing but libel against the Soviet Union and the People's Democracies."
He added, "Experience shows that such slanders are always exposed."
But he claimed that the mere fact that the United Nations agreed to discuss the Yugoslav charges had lowered the organization's prestige.
He called the charges "completely provocative" and a "heap of inventions, libels and slanders not borne out by facts, and devoid of any basis."

Realistic Air Raid Practice In New York City

New York, Nov. 28.
For 10 minutes today, New York's 8,000,000 cringed in grim, eerie silence beneath imaginary atom bombs. It was the first all-out air raid practice since World War II.

And there won't be another practice alert. The next — if it comes — will be the real thing.

"A success," Mayor Vincent R. Impellitteri labelled the test.

Sold Civil Defence Director S. W. Wallender: "I feel it would go just as well if an actual raid occurred."

He called it New York City's "pattern for survival."

It was a matter-of-fact business, carried on for the most part without smiles, with a growing consciousness of what it might foreshadow.

The vast, teeming city became a monument to fear within minutes after the sirens wailed out their warning at 10:33 a.m.

The great, pulsing roar of New York faded abruptly, then snapped off as though some giant switch had been pulled.

COMPLETE SILENCE

Pigeons wheeled nervously over deserted streets, the flap of their wings clearly audible in the silence.

In the busiest streets in all the world, the droning hubbub, the jarring roar of horns, the mad forward surge of crowds ceased.

The silence was so complete that the "click-click" of traffic lights could be heard as they changed from red to green and back again.

Five thousand persons were swept off Times Square as though by an unseen hand.

From tier to tier of the Empire State building's 102-story grandeur, venetian blinds snapped shut with military precision in thousands of windows.

Then the office workers headed for shelter.

A funeral mass was interrupted in St. Patrick's Cathedral on Fifth Avenue.

Thirty-five thousand people inside Rockefeller Centre's 15 buildings took cover within four minutes.

NO INCIDENTS

"There were no incidents—nobody fainted," was the report from the Centre, which houses as many people in a day as a fair-sized city.

Creation Of A European Army Delayed: Differences On Political Control

Rome, Nov. 28.

A communique issued tonight at the end of the North Atlantic conference said that the Council had adopted a resolution "expressing its hope that the Paris conference (on a European army) would conclude its activities at the earliest possible moment so that a definitive report could be made to the Council for consideration at its next meeting."

The communique added, "The resolution requested the appropriate North Atlantic Treaty agencies in the meantime to give early attention to the problem of correlating the obligations and relationships of the North Atlantic Treaty with those of the Paris conference on this question may be held and concluded as soon as possible."

The communique also noted:

1.—The Council had instructed its military and civilian agencies to put into action certain recommendations they had made to continue their work on others and to report more fully at the next session.

2.—The crucial report of the "Three Wise Men"—the economic planners of the United States, Britain and France—on Europe's ability to pay for bigger armed forces will be presented to member governments early in December.

3.—The Council took decisions on various military matters after hearing the recommendations of the Chiefs of Staff of the 12 Atlantic Powers and the Supreme Commander, General Dwight Eisenhower.

4.—The Council approved an interim report by the five-member Committee studying increased non-military co-operation between the Atlantic Pact countries.

5.—Greek and Turkish observers attended the Council session pending parliamentary approval of the decision to invite their two countries to join NATO.

FAIL TO AGREE

The Ministers of the 12 Pact powers failed to agree on two main practical issues facing them—the appointment of a United States Admiral to the Supreme Command in the Atlantic and the standard adoption of the American .300 rifle in preference to Britain's new .280 model.

Although Britain held out on these two points, it was thought probable that they would come up again when the British Prime Minister, Mr. Winston Churchill, meets President Truman in Washington at the turn of the year.

Spokesmen said that the main importance of the meeting was that it had clarified the issues on which the 1952 defence targets and the creation of the European army now depend.

But the session revealed serious differences between France and the Benelux countries on the final stages of the negotiations for the creation of a European army.

The clash occurred on the scope to be accorded to the supra-national political authority which is to control the army.

The Benelux countries were understood to oppose concession of sovereignty, particularly in financial matters, to the extent wanted by France.

U.S. DISAPPOINTED

This difference prevented the passage of a strong resolution presented by the United States and urging the immediate birth of the European army.

As a result, the whole question of the scope of the supra-national organ was referred back to the six-nation negotiations in Paris.

To this extent the Rome session of the Council was thought by observers here to have disappointed the United States, which had hoped that all the countries concerned would rally immediately to a strong plea by General Dwight Eisenhower for the effective creation of the European army.

Until this European defence community is in being, no German troops will be recruited, it was authoritatively stated.

Last night and this morning the Big Three Foreign Ministers worked on the remaining financial problems of the contractual treaties with Western Germany which are to end the occupation regime.

They also discussed the deadlock in concluding a treaty with Austria and decided to propose to the Soviet Government that the Austrian deputies' conference should meet again in the near future.

Tonight the Ministers attended a farewell dinner given for them by the present chairman of the Council, Mr. Lester Pearson (Canada) who is giving a concluding after-dinner address.

After the end of the session the Italian Prime Minister, Signor Alcide de Gasperi, the British Foreign Secretary, Mr. Anthony Eden, and Mr. Pearson gave Press conferences.

Signor de Gasperi stressed the defensive character of the Atlantic Pact.

He said, "If we could publish our military plans they would provide the best possible proof that we have no idea of aggression or anything like a preventive offensive."

Mr. Pearson said that the Council hoped to settle down and hold its meetings in a permanent headquarters some time in 1952. The Council would meet in Lisbon in February and again in another European capital during the Summer.

According to a usually reliable source there was now a strong prospect that the NATO Secretariat may be moved from London to Paris which would then, with SHAPE, become the home of the permanent headquarters of the Atlantic Pact.

BRITAIN'S POLICY

At his Press conference Mr. Eden said that Britain would not become a full member of this projected European army. But he pointed out that the "Big Three" declaration in Washington last September stressed Britain's desire to be associated in the closest possible way with all stages of the development of European unity.

Saying that the Rome session of the Council had advanced the determination of Atlantic powers to strengthen themselves, Mr. Eden added, "But we have closed no doors. We have not made it any more difficult for anyone to negotiate with us."

The Atlantic powers had every intention of building their strength to the point at which it would deter aggression, he said.

Mr. Pearson denied reports that the Atlantic Military Committee had recommended that Italy be allowed to build submarines—whichever her peace treaty forbids her to do.

The Council decided to shelve the blueprint drawn up a year ago for the naval command structure in the Atlantic unless Britain changes her mind, a spokesman disclosed. It also put aside the decisions made on the Mediterranean and Middle East commands.

IN TWO MONTHS

Mr. Schuman, before leaving for Paris, declared that the treaty setting up the six-nation European army—based on 160 million people—should be ready within the next two months by the time the Council meets again.

Mr. John Snyder, Secretary of the United States Treasury, in a brief statement said, "During the course of these discussions the United States delegation has made perfectly clear that the contribution of the United States to the NATO programme has been determined by the Congress for the current fiscal year. The United States delegation has no commitments with respect to aid beyond that period."

"We have, of course, given sympathetic consideration to the problems which our friends in other NATO countries face and have indicated continued United States participation in the mutual defence effort."

After the end of the Council session, the Foreign Ministers, except Mr. Schuman, who left for Paris at midday, held an informal meeting to discuss Korea.

A NATO spokesman said that the position of NATO would be carefully examined in the light of the news from the Far East.—Reuter.

Still No Agreement By Arabs

Paris, Nov. 27.

The seven Arab nations in the United Nations were reported today to have decided to continue studying for the time being the four-power proposal for a Middle East defence scheme.

The Egyptian delegation here proposed to the Arab countries that they issue a joint declaration, which would embody the following points:

1.—Joint support for Egypt's national struggle.

2.—Refusal to accept the defence proposals addressed to Egypt alone in October.

3.—Agreement to continue studying the later defence scheme proposals "in the framework of the Charter and of the Charter of the Arab League."

The Lebanon was understood to have supported the Egyptian idea of issuing a joint declaration, but the other Arab countries were apparently against such a move.

Syria, Saudi Arabia and the Yemen were stated to be of the opinion that there was no need to issue any joint declaration, even if this might be useful in replying to reports that the Arab nations were divided among themselves.

Their view was that on the first point of the Egyptian memorandum—that of support for Egyptian aspirations—the Arab League had already issued a statement to that effect.

On the question of further study of the four-power proposal, it was thought unnecessary to issue any formal statement either.

After some discussion, it was understood that all the seven nations have agreed not to issue a joint declaration for the time being but to continue their informal consultations on each issue as it arose.—Reuter.

Labour Query Misfires

London, Nov. 28.
Mr. Emrys Hughes, left-wing Labour Member of Parliament, asked in the House of Commons today what was the average weekly wage in British currency of unskilled Egyptian labourers employed by the Air Ministry in the Suez Canal area.

Mr. Nigel Birch, the Air Under-Secretary, replied: "Twenty shillings."

Mr. Hughes asked if the Minister would consider giving them a little extra for Christmas. Mr. Birch replied that they were now receiving more than under the late Labour Government.—Reuter.

COULDN'T REFUSE THE KING

Earl Mountbatten's Revelation

London, Nov. 28. Earl Mountbatten said here today that when he was first asked by Mr. Clement Attlee, then Prime Minister, to become Viceroy of India, he declined.

"I said that no one in his right mind would want to be asked to do a job as big as that," he said.

"Then I found that His Majesty had been told on the radio that it was the King who had asked me to take on the job."

"I am sure you will agree that if the King asks me to do a job, I must say yes. So I took it."

Lord Mountbatten also disclosed that when he returned from India to London with his plan for India's independence, Mr. Attlee at first told him a full-scale battle would be fought in the House of Commons.

"I told him that if that was the case, I would have to go on and there would be a most awful mess in India," he said.

TORIES HELPED

Next day Lord Mountbatten saw Mr. Attlee and other Cabinet members, and the Prime Minister still thought that the bill could not go through in the session if there was opposition.

"I therefore saw Mr. Churchill (then leader of the opposition), Mr. Anthony Eden, Lord Salisbury (Conservative leader in the House of Lords), Mr. Butler, Sir John Anderson and all the principal leaders of the opposition," Lord Mountbatten said.

"With the help of Lord Ismay (now Commonwealth Relations Secretary) we were successful in persuading them that it was not a party matter, but was a matter of great national importance."

"Far from opposing the bill they assisted in getting it through in the record time of just over two months," Reuter.

Tax Officials Purged

Washington, Nov. 28. Thirty-one tax officials were dismissed today in a sweeping purge of the United States Internal Revenue Bureau.

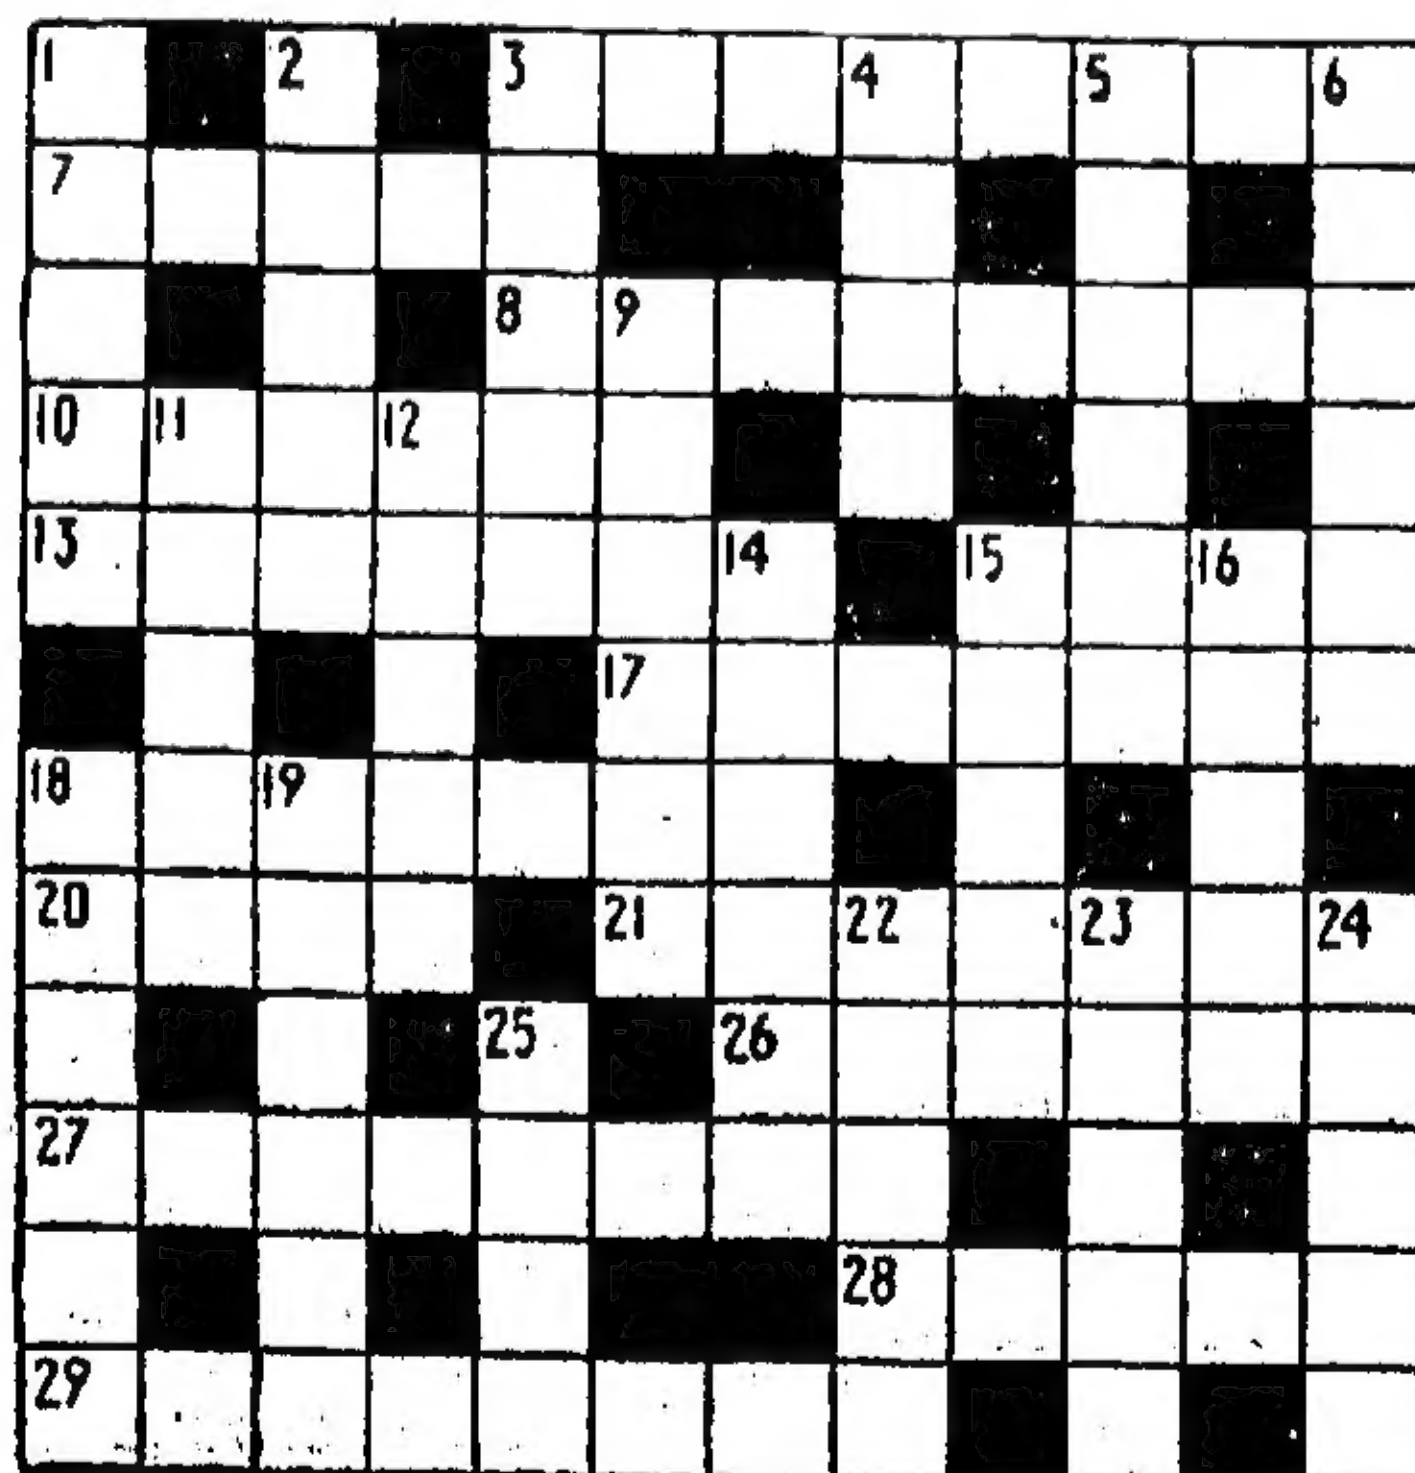

The purge followed a report by a House of Representatives sub-committee of corruption and inefficiency in many branches of the Bureau.

Top official dismissed today is James G. Smith, Internal Revenue Collector at San Francisco, who was earlier superseded.

President Truman personally dismissed him for "failure to manage his office properly."

Fifty-three officials have now been dismissed or have resigned while under investigation, Reuter.

Pole-Vaulting Tactics

The Vietnam garrison beat back the Vietnamese rebels and drove them off with artillery fire.—Reuter.

THE REFUGEE PROBLEM

London, Nov. 28.

The Foreign Affairs Under-Secretary, Mr. Anthony Nutting, was asked in the House of Commons today what he proposed to do to try to persuade the United Nations Organisation to hasten the relief and resettlement of Arab refugees.

After outlining the arrangements made by the United Nations and elsewhere for this purpose, Mr. Nutting hoped the countries involved in the area itself would do more to help in the solution of the problem.

Mr. Philip Noel-Baker, Labour, said that the provision of capital for settlement was an economic proposition. Over the last 30 years, large sums had been spent on refugees when, for smaller sums, they might have been made self-supporting. Mr. Nutting undertook to bear this in mind.—Reuter.

PONTIFF AGAIN AFFIRMS A CHURCH LAW 'Mother Or Child' Issue

Vatican City, Nov. 28.

Pope Pius XII reaffirmed today as the absolute law of the Roman Catholic Church that no direct attempt may be made on the life of a child even to save the life of the mother.

The Pope was supplementing the remarks he made three weeks ago on Catholic teaching on childbirth, which aroused lively controversy in several predominantly Protestant countries.

The Pope declared: "Any direct attempt on an innocent human life as a means to an end—in this case, to the end of saving another life—is unlawful."

He added: "This principle holds good both for the life of the child as well as for that of the mother. Never and in no case has the Church taught that the life of the child must be sacrificed to that of the mother. It is erroneous to put the question with this alternative: either the life of the child or that of the mother. Neither the life of the mother nor that of the child can be subjected to an act of direct suppression."

"In the one case, as in the other, there can be but one obligation: to make every effort to save the lives of both of the mother and of the child."

The Pope made this statement on Monday in a speech to the Congress of the Italian National Family Front.

SURGICAL ACT

The speech, in Italian, was published today with translations in French, German, Spanish and English. The Vatican had earlier stated that much of the Pope's first speech on childbirth had been wrongly translated, and was therefore falsely criticised.

The Pope told the Congress that "if, for example, the saving of the life of the future mother, independently of her pregnant state, should require a surgical act or other therapeutic treatment which would have as an accessory consequence in no way desired nor intended but inevitable, the death of the foetus, such an act could no longer be called a direct attempt on an innocent life."

"Under these conditions, the operation can be licit, like other similar medical interventions, granted always that a good of high worth is concerned, such as life, and that is not possible to postpone the operation until after the birth of the child, nor to have recourse to other efficacious remedies."

The Pope went on to make an addition to his previous statements on birth control.

BIRTH CONTROL

He said: "The Church knows how to consider with sympathy and understanding the real difficulties of the married state in our day."

Therefore, in our last allocation on conjugal morality, we affirmed the legitimacy and at the same time the limits—in truth very wide—of a regulation of offspring, which unlike so-called birth control, is compatible with the law of God.

"One may even hope (but in this matter the Church naturally leaves the judgment to medical science) that science will succeed in providing this licit method with a sufficiently secure basis and the most recent information seems to confirm such a hope."

The "licit method" referred to by the Pope was that of the observation of the wife's "safe periods."—Reuter.

India A Tourist Attraction

Bombay, Nov. 28.

Nearly 20,000 foreign tourists will visit India early next year, according to Mr. J. K. Atal, Director-General of the Indian Government's Tourist Board.

Mr. Atal, just back from a six-month holiday on the continent, told reporters that the first batch of 600 is expected during Christmas.—Reuter.

You can't buy a human heart

Restless, untiring, is the human heart and restless, untiring, is a Rolex Oyster Perpetual wristwatch. A far-fetched analogy? Not really. Consider that an Oyster Perpetual is designed to tick 432,000 times a day (no more, no less), and then remember that this watch will serve a lifetime, and then a lifetime after that. Remember that neither water nor damp nor dust can penetrate the Oyster case. Remember that the Rolex self-winding mechanism means that, as long as you wear your watch for at least 6 hours in 24, you need never even touch the winding button, unless you want to re-set the hands. Remember that year in, year out, the Oyster Perpetual silently, accurately, serves, and then ask yourself if it is not similar to the untiring human heart. And you can buy an Oyster Perpetual.

Going Up—Prices, And Our Prestige

NEW YORK, Tuesday. WHILE my back has been turned everything here—prices, taxis, rents, fares, blood-pressure—has gone up. I slipped the coloured porter at Grand Central Station one dollar (about 7s. 6d.) for carrying my four bags.

He said: "That's not enough. It's 25 cents for each bag now, and then there's mah tip." So it cost me 10s to get my luggage carried. In future I travel light and carry my own.

I crossed a picket line, despite hoots and hisses, to get my hair cut. The price was one dollar and 25 cents—another 10s.—and the barber told me the plan was to raise the price to two dollars (15s.) for once over lightly and not too much off the back.

My apartment has gone "co-operative" while I have been ranging Canada, which means that I either buy the flat for a large lump sum down and continue to pay upkeep rent, or get out. I am getting out. At the office there was a warning that the rent there, too, is probably going up. The bus and underground fare is to be increased to 15 cents—over 1s.—even if you ride only two blocks.

MEAT is up, fish is up, eggs and bread and vegetables are all up. During my two months' absence the bright blue American sky has obviously become the limit.

POCKET CARTOON by OSBERT LANCASTER

DON IDDON'S DIARY

Where is this dizzy inflation going to end? I am asking that, and so is everyone else barring the boobs and the morons.

Reuben Maury, editorial writer of the New York Daily News, America's largest newspaper, thinks it is going to end in a bust, in a crash, in a sickening toboggan slide. What goes up must come down, and believe me, what a fall there could be! The joker is how and when.

Your guess is as good as any American's. The window-cleaner knows as much about that as the Secretary of the Treasury.

I dined in the palatial Sutton Place apartment of a rich man in the publishing business. He clinked the ice in his highball glass, glanced at the lights over East River, and said: "There will be a bust all right, but I give it another ten years before it hits. For the next ten years there is going to be more and more and more inflation, until maybe you will be paying a dollar for a cup of coffee."

The shoe-shine man gives the boom another year, and then, bingo—collapse. The Wall Street financial wizards simply say they do not know, but as peddling stocks is their livelihood they mumble that the prosperity could be perpetual. Not on their lives, or yours either.

Still cheerful

No boom, not even this super-colossal mammoth monster, can last for ever. That, anyway, is my conviction since I resumed this New York assignment, and I don't know any newspaperman who thinks differently.

Fortunately, New Yorkers are not thinking about inflation or depression all the time, or we would all go crazy. There are other more cheerful matters. Even though the resident Englishman may soon be going around Manhattan with a pack on his back, and a stick for his home, he is now held in esteem. The reason? Messrs Churchill and Eden.

Anthony Eden's adult diplomacy, his language of restraint after the contaminating Billingsgate between Moscow and Washington, have been impressive. They show the stature of a statesman when most others around are pygmies.

I had a drink at the men's bar at the Waldorf-Astoria here with Anthony Eden just before his return to England. We stood there as he talked, quietly and confidently and with great erudition of the problems he had to face. Eden is modest and patient and painstaking. The U.S. is glad he will accompany Churchill to Washington in January.

Diverting week

THE first week back in New York has been diverting. We have had a heat wave, a cold wave, an all-out air-raid rehearsal, with sirens howling and fire engines, police cars, and ambulances racing through the trembling streets, a bomb scare, a dense fog, and a fire in the underground, or subway. Never a dull moment in New York.

The city seems to have got bigger, brighter, noisier, more feverish since I went away. Several new buildings—junior skyscrapers—have been jiggled together on Park and Madison and Fifth Avenues. New parking lots have replaced old brownstone houses, and Broadway is an even more blazing car-bundle lit by multi-million candlepower. The biggest signs are "Quo Vadis" at both the Capitol and Astor cinemas. Such big bright lights for such a dull film.

But at least my friends Deborah Kerr and Leo Genn do their best in this marathon bore, and the picture is drawing the dollars of the dupes in tens of thousands.

Resting time

HERBERT WILCOX and Anna Neagle are in town, and they asked them over. Wilcoxon is on holiday, resting after their triumphs. They plan some relaxation in a deserted hotel in Montego Bay, Jamaica, before returning home. I've known Herbert Wilcox and Anna Neagle for 15 years, and seen them ride flops and failures and climb to their present eminence in show business. Happy holiday, Herbert.

And happy come-back to Judy Garland. The last time I saw Judy was in her dressing-room in Edinburgh in the early summer. She could not rest between shows then, and she cannot now. Miss Garland, again packing them in at the Palace after her collapse, will have to take life more easily—fewer parties, less drastic diets.

The James Masons have also been around town. They are sitting very pretty, with Mason's career coming to full flower here and their fortune growing. Mason says he might be tempted by a musical and would like to sing. The new voice of America!

At the Copacabana I dropped in to see Carmen Miranda. She has the pop and vitality she showed five years ago.

Unlike Miss Garland, the "Brazilian Bombshell" knows how to conserve her energy.

The only play I've seen on Broadway is "The Moon is Blue," a comedy by Hugh Herbert and starring Barbara Bel Geddes, Donald Cook, and Barry Nelson. Not too funny to me, and Cook shows Miss Geddes and Mr Nelson how to act.

Britain's Barry Jones is adorning Broadway, achieving a 25-year ambition. Remember how brilliant he was in "Seven Days to Noon"?

Rudolf Bing now completely dominates New York's Metropolitan Opera. Whether he learned his talent in England or Austria, he has it in abundance.

FOOTNOTE—The Churchill-Eden visit to Washington is bound to redound to Britain's credit—in more ways than one.

How a great man selected his wife—BUT DON'T ASK WHO

IT IS UNTIL YOU HAVE READ TO THE END

IN 1925 he had reached the age of 38 without having paid any attention to women or even given them any serious thought.

He now decided that it was time he got married. Having made this decision, he set about the task of finding a wife with the same methodical thoroughness that he gave to any other job.

As a first shot in his campaign, he went off with a party of friends to Dinard in Brittany. In this gay seaside town, he hoped to meet his ideal woman.

As a start he took some lessons in ballroom dancing; he felt he should be proficient in some of the social graces of which his mother used to talk.

But none of the ladies in Dinard took his fancy, so he packed his bags and departed to Switzerland.

Hatred of war

HE went to Lonk in the Bernese Oberland and there threw himself with great vigour into the local sports of skiing and skating.

With his usual flair for leadership, he took over the organisation of the sports at his hotel. Here he met Mrs Carver, a widow, with two small sons.

Her husband had been killed in the war at Gallipoli, and this had left her with a deep hatred of war. Her main interest, apart from her children, was in the arts. She painted in oils and water-colours, she sculptured and was interested in pastels and wood-carving. He turned up against a tough proposition. He had no knowledge of art and his profession was one for which Mrs Carver had the greatest dislike.

How could two people with such different interests find common ground upon which to build a life together? It was through the boys that he got to know the mother. He taught them skiing and skating and spent a great deal of time with them. The boys in return became very fond of him.

Mrs Carver lived in Chiswick, and when they all returned to England he called on her.

By the spring of 1927 he found himself violently in love, and in the summer they were married. They set up home at Camberley, to be near the Staff

College, where he was an instructor.

Marriage opened up a new world to him. Up till now, owing to his difficult nature, he had been starved, or rather starved himself, of love and affection.

He had come to feel that he had to fight his way alone, with no one to turn to for understanding and real friendship.

In consequence, all his affection, as well as his tireless energy, had been lavished upon the Army. All this was now changed.

He was no less devoted to his career, but when his day's work was done he could go home and relax in the joy of family life, shared with an understanding wife and her two boys. He was to spend ten years of perfect happiness.

His wife's love for her husband softened her dislike of military matters, and no wife could have done more to help and encourage him in his career.

On his part, though intolerant and forceful on military subjects, was modest and unassuming in other matters.

He was always ready to listen and learn, when talk in the home among their friends was on subjects like painting, music, or books.

'Staff work'

BUT he could not forbear to exercise his passion for leadership in the running of the home. It was just another job of planning, and who could be more fitted to be the chief planner?

His early staff work was not a success. His lack of knowledge led to results at times more amusing than helpful.

His first plan for heating the house brought in a supply of fuel which overflowed into the garden and other odd places and was more suited to heating a factory than a private house.

On August 18, 1928, his happiness was crowned by the birth of his son David. And he set about arranging for the care and upbringing of his son.

He soon found himself out of his depth and said with great seriousness that he would not have another child as "it entailed too much staff work."

AND WHO is the man? Well, these extracts come from a new book: Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery: The story of his life, told mainly for the younger reader, by Lady Peacock (Hutchinson, 7s. 6d.).

THE CHAPMAN PINCHER COLUMN

Those 3 tell-tale twists under your nail

BY examining your fingernails under a high-powered microscope it is possible for a doctor to tell whether you are ever likely to commit an impulsive crime.

This astonishing claim is made today in an authoritative medical report of the most searching inquiry into the criminal mind ever undertaken.

As a result of the inquiry three London doctors believe they have found the first reliable system for distinguishing criminals who are mentally ill from those who are just wicked.

A microscopic examination of the minute blood-vessels under the fingernails is an essential part of this system.

Scientists have discovered that the shape of these blood-vessels seems to vary according to mental states.

In normal adults most of the fine vessels are long loops shaped like hairpins. In people prone to commit violent crimes on sudden impulse, the vessels are shaped like bridge arches.

165 TESTED

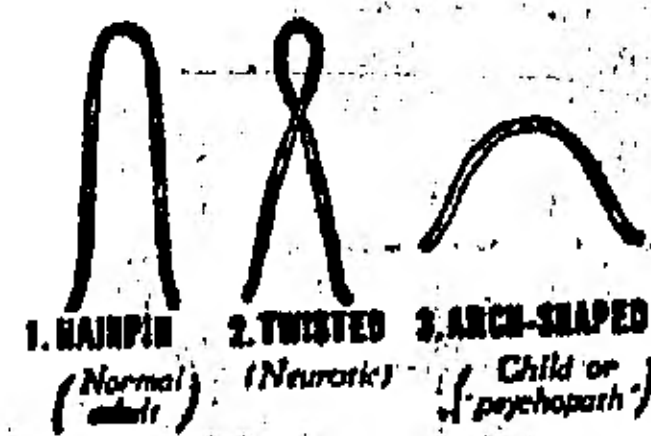

These findings have been fully substantiated by Dr John Lovett Doust, of London's famed Maudsley Hospital, after a study of the fingernails of 165 criminals, ranging from murderers to petty thieves.

The criminals—volunteers from Wormwood Scrubs, Brixton, and Wandsworth gaols—were taken to Dr Lovett Doust's laboratory.

He found that most of the prisoners known to be "psychopaths"—people so immature mentally that they have no proper control over their actions—generally had arch-shaped blood-vessels.

NOT MATURED

This seemingly irrelevant finding has a sensible foundation.

1. HAIRPIN (Normal) 2. TWISTED (Neurotic) 3. ARCH-SHAPED (Child or psychopath) were capable of understanding that they deserved to be punished for their conduct.

Inability to realise this is believed to be one of the surest symptoms of the "psychopath."

THE BACKGROUND

Finally, a "social background" inquiry into the criminals' former lives was carried out by Miss P. M. Perrot, an official of Wormwood Scrubs. She looked for such symptoms as lifelong failure to respond to punishment and inability to keep any job.

After three years' research the doctors believe that "no mentally normal patients could sham his way through a combination of all these tests."

If their findings are accepted by the Home Office they may bring about revolutionary changes in the conviction and treatment of people who appear sane but are not fully responsible for their actions.

How many mentally abnormal men and women are there in Britain's prison cells now? Probably more than 1,000, the doctors say.

Beauty Depends On Sum Of Little Things

So many "little things" should make up your weekly beauty programme. A warm bath, for example, in a tub fragrant with bath salts.

By HELEN FOLLETT

UNLESS a woman has her beauty tasks planned, she is likely to miss out on some small attentions that are necessary for battling old man Time. Good appearance has so much to do with social and business success.

before they tuck themselves between the sheets at night. Then they can start the day in fine form, feel that they have done their duty.

Warm Bath

Accent on black

FIRST spring fashions are appearing in Paris, teamed with winter outfits in the mid-season collections. They are tiny, flower-trimmed and made of silk. Yellow looks like a winner for spring 1952.

Jacques Fath limits his mid-season collection chiefly to Christmas party frocks. Black is the most important shade for evening. He uses it for "sheath" gowns, cut strapless, covered with fitted, tailored, boleros, with high necks and long sleeves.

Black cocktail dresses of modish velvet have enormous swirling skirts and lots of petticoats. Novelty, worn with half-length sleeves, is a suede gauntlet-glove with starched pique cuff.

that it is of paramount importance to attain it to the utmost possible limit.

Career girls who tear out of the house in a hurry every morning have to do their pulchritude-building home work

A warm bath will relieve fatigue, impart a sense of relaxation. Add a sprinkling of bath salts to give water sweet smelling softness. A five-minute massage of the complexion will keep the skin smooth. The complexion takes a lot of punishment from atmospheric dust and climatic changes, deserves a lot of petting. Hair will not thrive without brushing. A brief scalp friction will keep the blood streams buzzing.

All the year 'round, hands should have a gentle creaming once a day. Rubbing an emollient in the finger nails will help keep hangnails away. Lifting the surrounding cuticle with the orange wood stick is an insurance against rags and shags.

Washing Nylons

It takes only a moment to wash one's nylons, which should be worn only once and then washed. A look at one's shoes may make one realise that it is time to have new taps put on the heels. There's nothing quite so unattractive as an otherwise well-groomed girl whose really "down at the heels."

On the day off there must be a survey of one's wardrobe. Frocks to be sent to the cleaner. A button off maybe. Perhaps a few stitches to be taken in the hems of slips.

Always something. But good appearance depends upon little things. No girl can afford to overlook them.

THE TOPPER

LOOKING for all the world like a wool topper, here is a handsome coat of wool, perfect when it comes to warding off cold winds, and a nice finish to any dress or separates two-piece (below). The delicate champagne beige colour is set off by collar and cuffs of black velvet. There are folds down either side of the front and the pockets are stitched in black for extra smartness and colour contrast.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

These Two Practise What They Preach

By OSWALD JACOBY

BERNARD SHAW once said: "Those who can, do; those who can't, teach." He'd have been stumped at the sight of Peter Leventritt and Dick Kahn winning the Masters' Pair Championship in the recent national bridge tournament held at the Card School. That's a pair of young men who can practise what they teach.

Leventritt will probably use the hand shown today as a lesson hand in one of his advanced classes. He has a right to use it because it happened to him in the national tournament.

West opened the king of hearts, and Leventritt refused the trick. His reasons for refusing the trick are the most interesting part of the play.

There are eleven top tricks in the North-South hands. The spades command four tricks, since one opponent is sure to have at least four spades. The chief hope for the South is in the hearts.

A good declarer doesn't like to be on the short end of 2 to 1 odds, so Leventritt looked around for another chance to make his contract. The best chance lay in a squeeze. Even if the diamonds failed to break favourably, the contract could be made if the same opponent had four spades and four diamonds, or four spades and all the heart honours.

In most squeezes it is necessary to have winning tricks for all cards except one of the major suits. If you start to apply the pressure, that's why Leventritt refused the first trick. It left twelve tricks to be played, and he could win eleven of them—which was exactly the position he wanted.

West continued with the queen of hearts, and declarer won with the ace. He next ran his four clubs. Leventritt promptly cashed the ten of hearts and took the rest of the tricks with high spades.

West discarded his jack of hearts in the hope that his partner had the ten, but it wasn't so. Leventritt promptly cashed the ten of hearts and took the rest of the tricks with high spades.

IF Democritus were alive, as the old Latin tag goes, he would be laughing—at the people who try to analyse laughter.

A book published recently in America says: "Laughter is born of hatred and aggressiveness." This dismal balderdash is worse than the old theory, repeated by forty thousand cartons of scotch, that laughter is born of a feeling of superiority.

You laugh when a man sits down on his hat because you feel superior to him. But if there is any health in you, you laugh just as loudly when you sit down on your own hat. Another theory, mumbled over by people who never stop to think, is that it is the unexpected that makes you laugh. But the expected is just as likely to make you laugh as anyone knows who has waited for the comedian to fall over the mat.

What is laughter? I approach to laughter, I prefer the theory that laughter is caused by the eyes in the blood stream. "It is not," says Merton, "an emotion, but like everything else, a disease, an eruption prevalent in the cerebral stage of world development. The eyes are released in a cuneate mass, as when a gas is given off by pepper. Cackling then ensues."

There is a moral in this. Twenty Years of Upoor. She took the aria too fast. (Mude critic.)

RUSTIGUZZI once took an action against a critic who wrote that the "Crashed into the opening bar before the accompaniment was ready." Rustiguzzi claimed that this gave vulgar people the chance to make jokes about opening-bars. One paper did actually comment on the criticism as though singer and accompanist were on a sort of public crowd, and the hoodlums "Drive Accompanist: Rustiguzzi First Into The Bar." gave considerable offence in musical circles.

YOUR BIRTHDAY... By STELLA

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 29

BORN today, you combine individualism and originality of idea with the ability to put your plans into practical operation. You enjoy freedom of thought and action, yet you are capable of co-operating efficiently with those who share your ideas. You are highly temperamental—yet you seem to know just how far you can go and stop short of that point.

In other words, you are a bundle of contradictions and your nature is a complicated one. The stars have given you that touch of genius that should make your success in life a matter of time. You have a real interest in nature and enjoy the great outdoors. Hunting, fishing, competitive sports and athletics are avocations in which you should excel, especially in youth.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 30

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22)—A good "stay-at-home" night. Your pleasure in your family can prove exceptionally rewarding. CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 20)—If you owe someone a letter, write it now. Postponing the answer may only make it more difficult. AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19)—Important work comes first today. Finish the job—and then you can play and enjoy yourself. PISCES (Feb. 20-Mar. 20)—For you, the emphasis is on relaxation and pleasure, especially if you have been working hard.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 20)—This is a day to show friendliness. Be congenial with your associates at the office to increase popularity. TAURUS (Apr. 21-May 21)—Join others at a club meeting or some community affair. Your recent "hickleness" practically ceases to exist.

To find what the stars have in store for tomorrow, select your birthday star and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

CANCER (June 22-July 23)—Don't be too much of a lone wolf. It is better for you to get out and meet people once in a while. LEO (July 24-Aug. 23)—Work may be completed before you can devote time to pleasure. An early start assures fun this evening. VIRGO (Aug. 24-Sept. 23)—A good ending to this month features a new start for the new year tomorrow. Things are looking up.

LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23)—Finish up odd jobs today and end the month on a high note. Balance sheet and budget in good shape. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)—Positive making an important decision until you have had ample time to consider all angles of it.

Willy Toad and His One Poem

—It Made Such a Hit, He's Got to Write More!

By MAX TRELL

"POEMS! Why do they come to me for their poems?"

It was Willy Toad who was saying these words. Knarf and Hanid, walking through the Pine Tree Grove not far off, heard Willy's words. They came hurrying over to find out why Willy was being bothered by poems.

Any Poems?

At this moment Willy noticed Knarf and Hanid. "Hallo," he said. "Can you think of any poems?"

Knarf and Hanid now demanded an explanation from Willy.

"What poems?" Knarf asked. "Why do you have to write them?" asked Hanid.

"Well," sighed Willy as he put down his pencil, "I made a great mistake yesterday. I met my cousin Horace. He's a frog. He said, 'Would I please do him a favour. I said, sure, what favour, Horace? He said, I'm going to a meeting of frogs tonight, at the edge of the swamp. Every one who goes to the meeting has to write a poem. But I can't write one, and I wish you would write one for me.' I said, Does he have to be a very good poem, Horace. No, said Horace, just any old poem. So I said, all right, I'll write a poem for you."

"What did you write?" Knarf asked.

Willy nodded. "It wasn't a very good one, but Horace said it was fine."

Knarf and Hanid asked Willy to tell them the poem he wrote for his cousin Horace the frog. Willy smiled and recited it.

"This is a poem of wind and rain. Wind and rain, Wind and rain, When you come to the end just begin it again."

"That's the poem I wrote for Cousin Horace," said Willy. "He went to his meeting and recited it. He recited it all night long. When he came to the end he just began it again. By and by all the other frogs at the meeting began reciting it, too. And they recited it all night long, just like Horace did. For when they got to the end they just began it again."

"Oh!" said Hanid.

"And everybody else for miles and miles around also heard it."

Knarf and Hanid felt sorry for Willy. "We'll help you if we can," said Knarf.

Willy paused to sigh deeply.

Hundreds of Frogs

"And this morning, as soon as I opened my eyes, there all around me I saw hundreds and hundreds of frogs and cats and crickets and owls and katydids and sparrows. And what did they want? Just one thing!"

"A poem!" cried Hanid.

"Yes, a poem," said Willy. "They all said that the poem I had written for Cousin Horace was wonderful. I said, 'I couldn't possibly write another one. But they all said that if I could write one for Horace I could write another one for them. But I can't,' cried Willy, 'I can't!'"

Knarf and Hanid felt sorry for Willy. "We'll help you if we can," said Knarf.

I guess they must have liked it as much as Horace and the other frogs did. Because they all started reciting it. And when they reached the end, they just began it again. And finally," said Willy, "finally when morning came and the meeting got ready to break up, all his friends asked Horace where he got the poem from, and he said he got it from me."

Willy paused to sigh deeply.

"And this morning, as soon as I opened my eyes, there all around me I saw hundreds and hundreds of frogs and cats and crickets and owls and katydids and sparrows. And what did they want? Just one thing!"

"A poem!" cried Hanid.

"Yes, a poem," said Willy. "They all said that the poem I had written for Cousin Horace was wonderful. I said, 'I couldn't possibly write another one. But they all said that if I could write one for Horace I could write another one for them. But I can't,' cried Willy, 'I can't!'"

Willy paused to sigh deeply.

Willy kept muttering, "Poems... why do they ask me to write poems for them?"

"Oh, if you only could," said Willy.

So Knarf and Hanid thought and thought and thought, and finally they thought of this poem. It wasn't much good, either. But Willy was sure it would do. It went:

This is a poem of daisies and clover, Daisies and clover, Daisies and clover, When you get to the end just begin it all over.

Knarf and Hanid felt sorry for Willy. "We'll help you if we can," said Knarf.

UPSET OF THE YEAR

What was the upset of the year in Army sport? It came in the WRAC Inter-Command netball match when Southern Command inflicted the first defeat in two years on Eastern Command by 17 goals to 16.

Picture shows I.T. Audrey Williams on (in dark shirt), all-round WRAC athlete, who was second to Fanny Blankers-Koen in the 200 Metres in the last Olympic Games, jumping for the ball after a near miss at goal by a Southern Command attacker.

SEVEN ENTRIES RECEIVED FOR INTERNATIONAL SOFTBALL SERIES

By "GRANDSTAND"

Seven entries to the forthcoming International Series (Men's Section) have been received, this number being one more than in the previous contest as a result of Canadian participation for the first time in the Series, but the entry in the Women's Section is disappointing as the three expected entries are still doubtful starters.

Full rosters have not yet been submitted as representatives of the various nations are still scouting around for the best side in view of the recent ruling which places 18 registrations as the maximum, but judging from the talent available, the coming knockout tournament will be the keenest ever staged.

Teams participating in the Men's section are Portugal (winners 1950/1), Great Britain, China, Pakistan, Philippines, Canada and the United States, the last named being permitted to draw on Uncle Sam's Navy for playing strength.

The first-round is scheduled to be played off on Boxing Day, and the draw will take place at a General Council Meeting next week, by which time the rosters would have been registered, and a comparison of the relative strength be easier to gauge.

TOOTH AND NAIL

One thing about the current pennant chase is that every team is fighting tooth and nail to win, and the fact that the tail-end teams usually start out as underdogs in every game, seem to give them additional inspiration. That is the set-up this year, and no team can afford to be careless against such determined opposition.

Among the cellar dwellers who have given up hopes of the flag long ago are potential giant-killers, and present indications are that before the season is over someone is going to be surprised.

Basement teams that will pull off upsets are: Canucks ("A" Div.); Baseballers and Dodgers ("B" Div.); Bantams (Junior) and Pool To (Ladies).

It seems that the Canucks are set to avenge first round defeats for, after a long string of losses, head-man Bill Woo is determined to check the downward slide by persuading Big Boy Baker to turn up as they head into the home half of the series. Watch out for the Canucks!

Some of the interest in the Junior League games this week has been lost with the postponement of the Delawareans-Blue Sox waffle, but this is more than made up by the pair-off crucial "A" Division struggle in which the Saints tackle South China; while Frank Poon's Overseas side meet Pandas in a return engagement.

Atomic 'Biscuits' To Relieve Cancer Victims

Ottawa, Nov. 28.

Hidden away in the wilderness 140 miles north-west of here, Canadian scientists are using an atomic oven to bake a small batch of "biscuits" which may mean longer life for the world's cancer sufferers.

The "bakery" in the Canadian Government's multi-million dollar atomic research station at Chalk River and the oven is the atomic reactor which has been developed there.

There is only a small batch of biscuits—six in all—and they will not be fully cooked until next year.

When the work is completed, the scientists will have produced half a dozen grey-coloured discs of cobalt 60, about an inch across and less than half an inch thick, each of which will provide greater radio-activity than the world's entire existing supply of radium.

The little chunks of cobalt 60 are the hearts of the two-ton "cancer bomb," the first of which was dedicated recently at Victoria Hospital in London, Ontario. The cost of the installations was $30,000. It would require $50,000,000 worth of natural radium to produce the same intensity of gamma rays for cancer treatment—if there were that much available.

Cancer researchers emphasise that cobalt 60 bomb is not a new cure for treatment of cancer.

It acts on the same principle as ordinary X-ray machines, sending out its stream of gamma rays to destroy the malignant tissues. But the cobalt 60 bomb merely produces a greater intensity of rays which can be directed more accurately and penetrate more deeply than conventional X-rays.

HOW IT'S DONE

According to scientists here, to compare ordinary X-ray equipment with the new cobalt 60 apparatus is like comparing a candle to an acetylene torch.

The all-important discs of cobalt 60 are produced by placing natural cobalt, which is known as cobalt 58, in the nuclear reactor at Chalk River. There they are bombarded by neutrons and eventually, after months, a small portion of the cobalt 58 changes to cobalt 60, which throws off torrents of gamma rays for a period of several years.

As more pieces of cobalt 59 are cooked into cobalt 60, the new cancer treatment machine will become available for sufferers throughout the world. Dr. Ivan H. Smith, Director of the Ontario Cancer Foundation, said that the cobalt 60 bomb "epitomises the aspirations of physicists and radiologists who, since 1895, have striven to acquire improvement in quality and quantity of rays. Cobalt 60 has raised its mighty head to fulfil all dreams of gamma ray quantity and by the specificity of cobalt's two destructive, short, penetrating wave-lengths, we are offered a unique advance in quality."—Reuter.

Government Crisis In Syria Over

Damascus, Nov. 28. Meaurut Daulibi, Popular Party leader, today formed a new Syrian Cabinet, ending a three-week political crisis.

He surprised observers by himself taking over the Defence Ministry which has not been held by a civilian for a long time.

The cause of the political crisis was believed to be differences over the question of civil or army control of this Ministry.

The new Cabinet comprises seven members of the Popular Party, two independents and one member of the Muslim Brotherhood.

Damascus Radio named the other Ministers as follows:

Foreign Minister—Shaker el Ass, Popular Party.
National Economy Minister—Ali Bazz, Popular Party.
Interior Minister—Ahmed Kanbar, Popular Party.
Minister of Health—Muhammad Shawaf, Popular Party.
Minister of Public Works—George Shahin, Popular Party.
Minister of Education—Nuri Sibril, Popular Party.
Minister of Justice—Nounia Alami, Independent.
Minister of Finance—Abdul Rahman el Azeh, Independent.
Minister of Agriculture—Mohammed Muhrak, Muslim Brotherhood.—Reuter.

London, Nov. 28. Israel's Foreign Minister, Dr. Moshe Sharett, expects to visit Britain at the beginning of February, the Israeli Legation in London announced today.

The Legation said that Dr. Sharett hoped to spend most of his time in England at the invitation of the Joint Parliamentary—Reuter.

Britain Turns Down European Federation

MAXWELL FYFE'S SPEECH CAUSES BITTER DISAPPOINTMENT

Strasbourg, Nov. 28.

The British Home Secretary, Sir David Maxwell Fyfe, said today that Britain could not join in a European federation but was anxious to establish the "closest possible association with the European continental community."

He also told the 127 delegates of the 15-nation European Assembly that Britain might never enter fully into a European defence system.

France's Premier, M. Paul Reynaud, jumped to his feet charging Sir David with repudiating the motion calling for a European army proposed by his chief, Mr. Winston Churchill, last year.

The British Minister's speech caused general disappointment in the Assembly, many of whose members had hoped for close co-operation from Britain's new Conservative Government.

Sir David gave a detailed statement on the new Government's attitude to the Council of Europe, of which the Assembly is the "Lower House."

DOOR NOT CLOSED

Sir David said he could not promise "that our eventual association with the European defence community will amount to a full and unconditional participation."

At a Press conference later, he said that Britain was not "closing the door" on the European Army.

Sir David told the delegates that the European army was an integral and important part of the defence arrangements being made under the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation.

"It provides a means by which the Federal German Republic (West Germany) can not only contribute towards the common defence effort but can also be brought into even closer association with the European community," Sir David said.

Britain had strengthened her team of observers at the Paris European army conference to further its work and "to place what knowledge and experience we possess on these questions of defence at the disposal of our friends and allies who are attending this conference as full members."

Sir David said that Britain looked forward to the early realisation of the Schuman Plan for a European coal and steel pool and regarded it as a means of strengthening the Western European economy.

If the six countries—France, Italy, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg and Western Germany—ratified the Plan Britain would "set up a permanent delegation at the seat of the high authority to enter into relations and transact business with it."

He said Britain "desires to establish the closest possible association with the European continental community at all stages in its development."

GIVES PLEDGE

He pledged her determination to play a full part in the work of the Council of Europe, but reaffirmed long-standing British opposition to joining a European federation.

Britain had interests and responsibilities in three world areas—the Commonwealth, the United States and Canada and Western Europe.

Federation, long demanded in the unofficial European Parliament by France, Italy and West Germany but opposed by Britain and the Scandinavian countries, meant to Britain "a decision to transfer in advance and finally certain government functions to a federal body with a consequent elaborate drawn separation of federal and State powers," Sir David said.

It was not possible for a country in Britain's position to take such a step.

M. Reynaud, prominent French federalist, immediately afterwards said that he was bitterly disappointed at Sir David's speech.

He appealed to delegates to "try somehow to influence our British friends so that they will not repudiate Churchill's own motion."

(Mr. Churchill put his motion for the immediate setting up of a European army on November 8 last year. Most of the British Socialist delegates to the Assembly abstained.)

M. Reynaud said he wanted to warn the British Government that if it did not participate in the European army he was almost certain that the French Parliament would also refuse to have anything to do with it.—Reuter.

Rivals For Leadership

Washington, Nov. 28.

Senator J. W. Fulbright (Democrat, Arkansas) said in an interview today he saw India and Japan as future rivals for recognition as leader of Asia.

He said the rivalry "is very real" and represents an international problem which other nations should approach with caution.

Senator Fulbright, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, did not predict the outcome, but he thought India would be handicapped by her "disposition not to co-operate" in world affairs.

He added that this referred to her refusal to join in the Japanese peace treaty conference and certain of her other stands.

Another handicap would be the internal problems, he said. "India has so many internal problems that she is hard pressed to maintain orderly government."

Japan also had the "terrible economic problem" of recovering from World War Two under cold war conditions, he said. This posed serious difficulties in her trade. But Japan had ingenuity and ambition to carry her ahead of other Asian countries in the next several years, the Senator added.

He refused to predict the long-range outcome of the rivalry with India.—Reuter.

Lyttelton's "Open Mind"

Colombo, Nov. 28.

The British Colonial Secretary, Mr. Oliver Lyttelton, said here today he had no immediate solution to the bandit problem in Malaya, but he thought it a good idea to introduce helicopters into the war.

Mr. Lyttelton, who arrived here on Wednesday night on his way to Singapore, told pressmen he was going to Malaya with "an open mind" on her problems.

His visit was for the special purpose of seeing what more could be done in the long drawn-out war against the Communist-led guerrillas.

With the situation in Egypt as it was, he did not see how reinforcements could be sent to Malaya at present.—Reuter.

Truce Talks Deadlock Feared

Tokyo, Nov. 29.

A deadlock in the armistice talks loomed today as the truce delegates met at Pan Mun Jom with completely opposing ideas on how to end the shooting.

Both sides went back to the 11 a.m. meeting after a night's study of the other's proposal for bringing about a ceasefire and ways and means to enforce it. The hard core of disagreement after the proposals are pared down is that the United Nations wants joint inspecting teams to have free access to all parts of Korea—presumably all the way from Pusan to the Yalu River.

The Communists refused to let anyone behind their Korean front curtain.

Radio Peking said today the UN counterparts at the first meeting yesterday that the idea of free access was "absolutely unacceptable to our side."

Much hard work and considerable compromises on either side appeared to be necessary before the Communists' "not broad enough" proposal and the UN "too broad" suggestion could be brought together.

While the truce delegates talked the UN offensive ground action in Korea rolled to a virtual halt. The only offensive action reported in the last 24 hours was by the Communists. While officials denied that a "fire only if fired upon" order had been issued, all reports indicated that the UN infantry and artillery opened up only in answer to the Communist fire.—United Press.

Walkie-Talkies Used To Aid City's New Traffic Diversion

No Serious Congestion Of Vehicles This Morning

Equipped with walkie-talkies, traffic Police were on the go from 6 a.m. today directing traffic in the centre of the town to conform with the new diversions improvised as a result of the closing of Murray Road and Chater Road from the Hongkong Club to Murray Road.

At the same time PWD workmen began tearing down the Murray Road fencing of the Hongkong Cricket Club and Forestry officials started to fell some of the 70-year-old banyan trees bordering the Club in preparation for the widening of Murray Road to an overall width of 40 feet.

The closed area of Chater Road is also being resurfaced.

Murray Road has long been recognised as a serious bottleneck. Only 22 feet wide, and carrying almost the whole of the Colony's west to east traffic, it slows down the flow not only in the heart of the city, but for considerable distances from the area.

Besides the widening which will slice some 15 feet off the northeast corner of the Hongkong Cricket Club ground, other improvements include the rounding off of corners of the Club ground and the construction of pedestrian islands.

The closure of Murray Road and part of Chater Road will not be for long, but it entails a great deal of reorganising of the normal traffic flow as well as the closure of some recognised parking areas in the Central district.

Large bright yellow diversion signboards have been raised with traffic stands at the entrance to Queen's Pier right in the centre of the former Statue Square, outside the Hongkong Bank at the junction of Wardley Street and Des Voeux Road.

Central while the main traffic control at the bottom of Garden Road has been shifted east to the junction of Murray Road and Queen's Road.

GARDEN ROAD TRAFFIC There was also a traffic stand at the Peak Tram station where a constable directed traffic down Garden Road which can now turn eastwards into Queen's Road Central.

East-bound traffic have to take the inner lane while traffic going up Garden Road have to take the outer lane. The Police are firm on this and will not allow crossing of lanes. As far as could be seen there were no serious hold-ups this morning, the smoothest flow being of traffic travelling east.

Additional traffic Police have been put on duty at key points and the Deputy Commissioner of Police, Mr. Maxwell and the Divisional Superintendent of Traffic, Mr. D.G. Tebbutt, spent some time this morning observing the working of the new system.

According to a high Police official the plan was working very smoothly; professional drivers were very good while motorists were co-operating most reasonably and intelligently.

But the real test, the Police agree, will come this evening, just after 5 o'clock.
